Credit Union options considered at meetings

by Andrew Milne

Banking in Haliburton County may take a turn for, what some consider, the better, if a few local citizens have their way.

Andrew Campbell, general manager of the Haliburton Development Corporation, invited representatives of the Parry Sound Muskoka Credit Union to speak at meetings in Minden and Haliburton, about the advantages of setting up credit unions in those communities. The Parry Sound group indicated it would be interested should a local group wish to affiliate with their organization. This is a common practice in establishing local credit unions, they said.

Turnout at the September 14 meeting in Minden was low (seven people), but Campbell says he wasn't entirely surprised or particularly discouraged. He says a lot of people really don't like attending this kind of meeting, and that several local people have already expressed interest to him privately.

Bryan Fisher, CEO of the Parry Sound credit union, describes a credit union as an institution that is "controlled by the people — the members — that it serves. It is a financial alternative that provides any service you would expect from financial institutions, such as savings, chequing, mortgages, commercial loans, personal loans, RSPs, RIFs, automatic banking machines, debit cards, credit cards... all the services that you would expect from a bank."

"A common perception is that they're very small, and sometimes not safe, which is completely untrue... there is a very large credit union system in Canada and they support each other. There are 1,000 credit unions in the country which serve 9.4 million people and which control 39.4 billion (dollars) in assets. It's a very large system. The deposit insurance is similar to that of a bank, except that banks are federally regulated and credit unions are provincially regulated and each province has its own regulatory body and insurer."

Bob Gordon, vice-president of credit for the Parry Sound credit union, was also present. Gordon answered a number of questions about the lending practices of credit unions. Asked why a community credit union might approve a loan chartered banks might refuse, Gordon explained that is partly a matter of community interest and involvement, and partly a matter that chartered banks are

Red carpet welcome

The Minden community rolled out the red carpet last week as a bus load of visitors arrived from Germany. The travellers were on a ten day tour of Canada and included Minden on the itinerary because they live near the city of Minden in Germany. The visitors toured the community, visiting the museum, the two chartered banks (the tour was sponsored by a German bank and so a number of executives travelling with the group were keenly interested in our financial institutions) and saw portions of the new Archie Stouffer Elementary School. Monday evening they were guests of honour at a banquet at the Community Centre. Reeve Bern Berry and Deputy Reeve Lewis Stevens are seen above greeting the heads of the delegation, Mr. Hans Laus, centre foreground, and behind him Mr. Hans Lutterman, after the bus arrived at the Community Centre. Their tour guide, Mrs. Karin Grigat of Toronto is at the left, while Hana Casper of Minden, with her back to the camera, translates the greetings for the dignitaries. Mrs. Casper was one of a number of German speaking Minden area residents who volunteered to assist with the visit by serving as translators. A complete report on the visit can be found on page three with additional photographs on page 23.

One inch equals $25,000.

If bass have a sense of humour, there's a 12-inch smallmouth bass swimming around Head Lake near the park in Haliburton with a big grin on its face. That bass was one of the ones weighed in at the Bass 'n' Tario Classic V on the weekend of September 10 and 11 and because it was under the size specified in the tournament's regulations (minimum length nose to tail had to be 13 inches) it cost the team of Garnet Armitage and Ron James of Brooklin the first prize, which was worth $25,000.

Adding to the drama of the weigh-in, the three top teams in the hunt for the grand prize trailered their boats in front of the stage at Sunday's finale and unloaded their fish from the live wells.

Ron Hamilton and Mark Boag of Hamilton were the first duo to make the dramatic entrance since they were in third place after the first day of competition. With their catch for the day, they had a grand total of 10.27 pounds, which temporarily put them in first place.

Bob Hayford and Don Thompson of Dunsford were next and their total for the two days was 10.93 pounds.

Armitage and James were the last team to pull their boat in front of the stage. They had two fish. The first one taken from the live well was a small one that obviously wouldn't put them over the total of Hayford and Thompson. But the next was a nice four and a half pound largemouth that gave the Brooklin duo a little more than a pound to spare for the top prize.

Within two minutes of accepting the keys for the $21,000 Stratos bass boat with a 140 horsepower Evinrude outboard motor and all the trimmings, there was an announcement that one of the fish Armitage and James had weighed in was under the size specified in the tournament rules. The fish was measured and found to be one inch under the prescribed length.

Tournament rules clearly state that any fish weighed-in was less than 13 inches long, would cost the team that entered it a one pound penalty, besides deducting the weight of that fish.

With the weight of the illegal fish and the one pound penalty deducted,

Queen's Park display

Haliburton Highlands artists are being featured in two showcases at Queen's Park, Toronto. The displays provide visitors to the building with examples of the wide variety of artistic work being created in the county and serve as a timely reminder of the autumn Studio Tour scheduled for October 1 and 2. Featured in the display on the right is the woodworking of Derek and Paul Rolfe, painting by Edgar F. and Lynn Hancock and decorative painting by Marion Kinsman. Highlighted below is stained glass by Wendy Ladurantaye and Joyce Pruyers, painting by Deborah Bates, silk scarf designs by Helen Newton and painting by Jan Murray. The work, which can be seen in the main lobby, behind the reception desk, is on display until the end of September.

German visitors treated to Minden hospitality

The community opened its arms and hearts to a group of 40 visitors from Minden, Germany last Monday. The reception left the members of the visiting delegation delighted, according to a spokesman for the group.

Mr. Hans Laus, the chairman of the bank which organized the tour to Ontario, told the gathering Monday night how pleased they all were with the warm hospitality they had been shown in Minden.

The visit began early Monday afternoon when the group arrived on their tour coach from Ottawa. They were greeted at the Minden Community Centre by members of the municipal council, a number of citizens, many of whom had travelled to Minden, Germany six years ago, members of the museum committee and horticultural club, who assisted with the luncheon preparations, and other interested citizens.

The visitors were presented with lapel pins featuring municipal, county and Canadian logos and pre-stamped post cards showing the view from Pike's Peak.

The visitors mixed easily with the local residents. Many of the German guests were able to speak some English and a number of German speaking members of the local community were on hand to assist in translating the more complicated exchanges.

Following the lunch, the group visited the County Town Museum complex where they had an opportunity to tour the buildings. A group photo was taken in front of the Bowron Homestead. (Copies of the photo were distributed to the visitors later in the day as a souvenir of their visit to the community.)

Since the tour of Ontario was sponsored by the Volksbank Enger Spenge, a bank serving the home-towns of the visitors, a number of the participants were interested in visiting the Toronto Dominion bank and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce. While at the banks they inquired about the operation of the automatic teller machines and the use of computers to permit long distance banking to take place. Mary Coneybeare of the Minden Toronto Dominion branch noted that the visitors were interested in the foreign exchange and the corporate structure of the bank. They also enquired about the computer training programs in use at the bank and the expansion of banking services into areas such as mutual funds and investment sales.

Several members of the group visited Archie Stouffer Elementary School for a tour of the new facility. They were greeted by Principal Peter Forgrave who, with the assistance of teacher Lisa Kowaltschuk, who speaks German, they visited a number of classrooms and asked about educational programs at the school. They were surprised to learn that the student population at the Minden school is close to 700 and that most of the students arrived at the school by bus.

Others members of the group strolled through town, shopping and taking photographs.

The visitors were in the area for three nights, staying at PineStone Inn. On Tuesday they travelled to Algonquin Park to see the autumn colours and stop in at the visitors' centre. Wednesday was a free day on their schedule so they visited sites throughout the county and enjoyed an aerial view of the colourful Highlands. The group left for Gravenhurst on Thursday for a cruise on the Segwun and then to the Toronto airport for their return flight to Germany. Their ten day tour of Ontario included Toronto, Niagara Falls, Kingston and Ottawa, as well as Minden and the Highlands.

Following the afternoon visit to the village on Monday the group returned in the evening for a banquet hosted by the municipality. Once again a large number of area residents were on hand to meet with the visitors. During the meal, an exchange of gifts took place between local representatives Reeve Bern Berry, Deputy Reeve Lewis Stevens and Times publisher Jack Brezina and German spokesman Mr. Laus. An exchange of banners between presidents of the Lions Clubs from the two communities, Mr. Hans Lutterman from Germany and Tom Gardner of the Minden club took place. Greetings were also expressed by Mr. Hans Scheller the tour leader.

Following the dinner, the student saxophone quartet Times 4, under the direction of Walter Barnes, provided a musical presentation. The visitors were so taken by the evening that they then formed an impromptu choir and returned the favour by singing a number of German folk songs. Everyone in the hall joined in the final presentations by the "choir" as they broke into a number of songs which were well known by both the English and Germans in attendance.

Music was obviously very much a part of their trip to Canada, as it is in their life back home, as the visitors from Germany returned some of the hospitality they received when they visited Minden on Monday. The group quickly took to the stage and sang a number of German and English folk songs to the delight of their hosts, who happily joined in when they heard a familiar musical refrain.

Addition at ASES will be officially opened tonight

Archie Stouffer Public School will be cutting the ribbon to open its new wing September 19.

The expansion adds approximately 35,000 square feet to the building, virtually doubling the floor space of the school, said Jim Bradley, Superintendent of Business for the Haliburton County Board of Education.

"In addition to that we did renovations to every room," said Bradley.

This included the addition of a new roof, the removal of all asbestos from the structure, and numerous smaller renovations. The current gymnasium was converted to a library, and a high efficiency lighting system was installed.

The new wings includes a double gymnasium and 18 classrooms.

The renovations and additions were started in June of 1993 and cost in the neighbourhood of $4.6 million.

The ribbon cutting ceremony will start at 7:30 pm September 19, and will include remarks by Director of Education Brad Saunders, ASES Principal Peter Forgrave, chairpersons Lloyd Griffiths and Walter Bunn, Muskoka-Georgian Bay MPP Dan Waters, Victoria-Haliburton MPP Chris Hodgson, Victoria-Haliburton MP John O'Reilly, and by Robynn Nishio of the Ministry of Education.

The dedication will be by the Reverend Peter Walford-Davis of Minden United Church.

The ribbon will be cut by Bunn, and by Scott Fennell and Jennifer Wales, both students of the school.

Refreshments and an open house follow the ceremony. Everyone is welcome.

The Importance Of Explaining Death To A Child Is Elementary.

Adults understand all too well the inevitable nature of death. But to a young child, the death of someone close can often be a confusing, disturbing, and incomprehensible experience.

That's why we encourage parents to talk with their children about death before the problem arises. We have several suggestions that can help:

1. Keep your level of explanation appropriate to your child's level of understanding and development.
2. Listen carefully to your child's questions and make sure none are left unanswered.
3. When your child's questions have been answered, stop. Usually your child only wants satisfactory answers to specific questions.

To learn more about the importance of explaining death to a child, call or stop in for complimentary literature.

often answering to financial pressures incurred in other parts of the country.

Gordon, who says he has worked for virtually "every kind of financial institution there is", said "If you think about policy set for almost any other kind of organization — it is set outside of our community.. My experience in a chartered bank was this: I came to Muskoka... and had someone ask for a mortgage on a tourism establishment. I looked it up in the book, and lo and behold this was a better deal than anything anyone had ever seen. It had lots of equity. It had a 25 year history of profitability. It was making a lump sum payment on an existing mortgage and then wanted a smaller mortgage..."

"So I sent it in to (the bank's head office in) Toronto, and someone said 'Well, we don't want any more destination tourism property mortgages.'"

"I was sitting in the heart of... the tourism industry. I didn't have one customer (like that) with a mortgage. This was the first one. And then they told me they had too many."

Credit unions, by contrast, said Gordon, don't have commitments in other communities which lead to this kind of concern.

"Being members of the community we are very responsive to the members' needs and to the community needs," said Fisher.

Credit unions, said the Parry Sound organization's representatives, are entirely owned by the people who use them. This means that to get one started, capital investment from members of the community is required, and for communities the size of Minden and Haliburton, that probably amounts to $300,000. The credit unions require a minimum investment of $100 from each member (you get it back if you quit, no risk, no interest), but clearly larger investments are required from some members if the institution is going to get started. These are available at various levels of return and risk, and at varying term lengths, according to how the members wish to set it up.

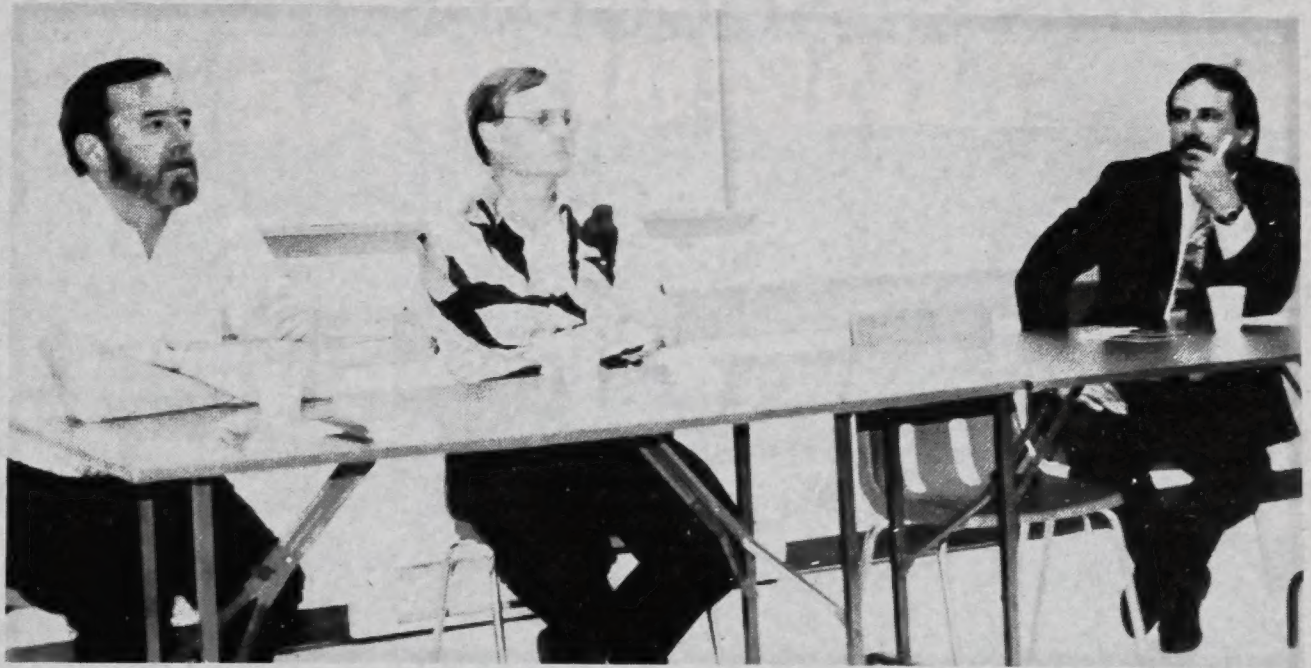

In addition, the reps had the following to say:

— Credit unions use independent auditors, and financial statements are made available to the members at annual meetings.

— Credit unions in Ontario are regulated by the Ontario Ministry of Finance, which does regular examinations to ensure that the institutions are acting in accordance with Ontario law as well as with their own by-laws.

— Credit unions have actually preceded the chartered banks in introducing a number of the more innovative banking services, including automatic banking machines.

— Costs of services and interest rates are often better in credit unions than in larger organization for the simple reason that they are non-profit and have a much smaller management structure to support.

Asked about the disadvantages of credit unions, the representatives said that they were probably "the wrong people to ask," but did acknowledge that, being small, most credit unions are in no position to make large loans (in excess of $800,000).

Campbell, however, said few businesses in the region would be likely to wish to borrow such amounts anyway.

Dave Taylor, an examiner for the Ministry of Finance, does inspections of credit unions. He told the Times that there is no organization equivalent to the Better Business Bureau rating credit unions (the Parry Sound bureau had no listing for the Parry Sound credit union), but there is of course the ministry itself. "There is also the share deposit agency — Ontario Share Insurance Deposit — they also do financial monitoring (of the credit unions)," he said.

Long-time Cardiff councillor dies

Described as a man who was dedicated to his community and the county, Michael (Mack) Peters of Cardiff, died September 11 at the North Hastings District Hospital in Bancroft.

Haliburton County Warden Jim McMahon said Mack Peters was the sort of individual who tended not to become involved in confrontational issues. "However, when the posturing was over, what Peters had to say usually made a great deal of sense and people listened," McMahon said. "He was very knowledgeable on the many issues facing the county and, as far as I can recall, he never missed a meeting."

A life-long resident of the Cardiff area, he joined the local council in 1971 as a councillor and served in a variety of positions until his death. Mack Peters was reeve of Cardiff for six years between 1983 and 1988 and stepped in when a resignation in 1991 left the reeve's chair vacant. He served as deputy reeve for five years from 1973 to 1982 and was appointed to the post in June 1993, again as a result of a resignation.

Cardiff clerk Roger Hogan said there was no doubt his death would be a loss to the community. "As with all rural municipalities, elected officials are involved in just about all aspects of the community," he commented. Peters was also a member of the board of Directors of the local Development Corporation.

The funeral service was held September 14, in Bancroft. Mack Peters was 70 years of age.

Kinmount business thriving

Signs of success

Adding the finishing touches! Lee Henderson puts a special coating on the sign making it weatherproof and ready to ship scratch-free.

Signs, signs, everywhere signs ... Doug Cooper sands yet another sign to be sent to somewhere in eastern Canada.

by Kelly Pettinger

Just past the Kinmount fairgrounds on Highway 503, you might notice a large lawn with about 100 wooden signs, including cartoon characters and forest and farm animals. If it turns your head more than once, go in and have a visit with Gord

Daniels, owner of Daniels Novelty Wood Products.

With a small staff of about ten, Daniels has made his business well known across Canada and in the United States as far south as Indiana. The 20-year-old business began "by accident" in Scarborough, when Daniels made signs for himself and a few close friends and family. The orders for wooden signs grew until Daniels decided this could be a great new business.

"The business moved from Scarborough to Kinmount in 1978 because such a small business couldn't compete with the bigger businesses in the city. There were rules that we couldn't help but break, and after a while we realized that we had to move," said Daniels.

But Daniels did not move with his business. Instead he worked in Kinmount five days a week and travelled back to Scarborough for weekends.

"For 12 years I slept on a cot right here in my office," laughed Daniels. "I wasn't ready to leave the city. My wife and I loved it there, but I guess there comes a time (in a person's life) when you need to move on and out of the city. I guess that's what we did. We moved to the other side of Kinmount in 1990, and it is a big change from the city. I really like it here though. It's small, but not too busy," said Daniels.

Throughout a busy year, Daniels will receive between 6,000 and 8,000 orders for custom made signs. "That is a lot, and we have even more people who stop by the shop to pick up ready-made products. People will stop in from time to time, but most of our business is by word-of-mouth and many of the orders come from outside the province," said Daniels.

When asked for the favourite saying or poem he had to write on a sign, Daniels replied, "I really don't know. A lot of the weird ones are not exactly family-oriented. One of the popular ones is a sign for small dogs. It says 'Beware of dog. She's small, but she knows Kung-Fu.' A lot of people like that. Another popular request for signs, is a cross or tombstone for people's pets."

What would your sign say? Gord Daniels stands in front of his display of wooden signs. The display can be seen on Highway 503, three kilometres east of the Kinmount fairgrounds. Stop in and see the amazing wood products and how they are made.

Another option?

There probably aren't many individuals in Haliburton County who haven't encountered first hand, or heard from a close acquaintance, of a problem dealing with one of Canada's major chartered banks. Especially in the past three years, when the economy was anything but buoyant, business people in particular had a difficult time finding a sympathetic ear when dealing with the larger financial institutions.

Now we are the first to admit that banks, like all businesses, must weather the vicissitudes of economic changes which sweep through the country. And we also acknowledge that, for the most part, staff at the local branches do try to accommodate the needs of their clients. However, their hands are often tied by regulations that are written in some distant board room and which often appear to have little relevance to what is happening on main street in small town Canada. We also have to wonder where the astronomical profits (the Royal Bank for instance just recently announced a $1 billion profit for the past year), and the equally stratospheric salaries that the CEOs of Canada's chartered banks pocket, come from, although we know full well part of those earnings come from the pockets of the banks' customers.

With these thoughts in mind, it was interesting to hear the presentations from two members of the Muskoka Parry Sound Credit Union when they visited Minden and Haliburton last week. They spoke of community ownership, responsiveness to community needs and portrayed a willingness to be more understanding of the needs of their clients. The introduction of another financial institution, a credit union, into the local economy may be just the tonic this county needs to get it up and growing again.

Of course it would be foolhardy to think that a just because someone is a member of a credit union that financial supports would arrive in an unending flow. A properly managed credit union has rules by which it must abide. There are times credit unions have to say 'no' to their customers or take legal action to protect their position.

However, we think the business sector in particular should take a close look at the options offered by being a part of a non-profit, community-owned banking institution. While the information meetings in Minden and Haliburton didn't attract particularly large crowds, we think the community should consider what a credit union affiliation might bring to the county. If nothing else, having another financial institution serving the county would help to focus the attention of those who currently have been enjoying the profits realized from small town Canada, main street business.

Stranded motorist finds friendly help in Minden

Editor:

My family and I have been in the Minden area for many years. As a city resident, I have often been given cause to remark on the friendliness and "good-neighbour" attitude of the people who reside here.

I certainly felt the full measure of the "small town" kindness this past weekend when I found myself in a bit of a crisis.

On the evening of Sunday, August 28, my mother and I had to rush my 15-year-old daughter, Whitney, to the Minden Hospital. After an examination, it was determined that further treatment, and a consultation with a specialist was necessary, requiring an immediate trip to Lindsay.

Before I could make the one hour trip. However, I was going to need gas. The question was where to get it. It was nearing midnight, and all the area stations were closed.

Fortunately, my mother spotted the cashier in the Westside Jug City, closing up. Though the store was closed, she listened to my mother explain our circumstances, and offered to call the owner of the adjacent Cango station for help.

Within minutes, our "rescuer" arrived, opened the station, and filled-up my car. He was sympathetic, and offered good luck on my daughter's recovery.

The care my daughter received that evening resulted in her complete recovery, and the kindness of our Minden neighbours ensured we got her there without delay.

I regretfully, did not get the names of the two individuals who so generously came to our aid on Sunday evening, but I'm hoping that they will read this letter and accept our sincere appreciation for their kindness.

Distressing

Editor:

To me, it is distressing to visit Hyland Crest. I have been going there since the Home was built and there have been a lot of changes, many not for the better.

It started about six years ago. I never did see in the newspaper why Dwight Morely was fired. There were protest walks and people being released after many years of good service.

For the past year there appears to be a power struggle happening. You don't see a happy face anywhere, among the staff or residents. When you walk through the door you can feel the depressing atmosphere.

They are trying to make things better, but when those at the top don't have the proper experience, the residents have to live with the results. At one time, a person was expected to have a B.A. or college education along with recommendations from a previous job. That doesn't seem to apply any longer. The residents and the community deserve the best people possible.

There are many things happening that are covered up. One such event occurred to my family last winter. On one such occasion in February my sister was "lost" for a period of time. They looked everywhere for her before it was discovered she had joined a bus trip, but her name wasn't on the trip list. They explained they had been looking on the wrong list. Regardless, my sister was "missing" for a period of time and they didn't know where she was. Other people have had similar things happen at the Home.

I hope a new administrator will be hired soon, one who will have the training and experience and who can return the Home to what it once was.

'Naive and foolish'

Dear Mr. Allan Rock,

I have read many articles, listened to you personally on the radio and television. I find it hard to believe a man such as yourself, could be so naive and foolish. I do not agree that the answer to our urban crime problem can be solved by further removal of the rights of the hard working, tax paying, law abiding, gun owners of this country. You are attacking the wrong group of people. Your own statistical data proves this.

A poor criminal justice system and unbelievable immigration policies appear in the news almost daily. I believe your firearms proposal is meant to be a cover up. The average Canadian is not a fool. I will not stand back while you attempt to pass foolish laws to cover up the mess.

I am a law abiding citizen. I live in Etobicoke, and own land and hunt in the Haliburton area. I find it nothing short of unbelievable that you would have me turn my guns in to a central lockup in a rural location and register them for a fee with a national registry.

Canada's vast land mass is mostly rural. In rural Canada the majority of people own firearms for legal purposes. There are also hundreds of thousands of legal firearms owners in cities and towns across Canada. In making any decision, keep in mind that his country has a history of responsible sport hunting and firearms use.

Recognizing federal budget restraint, where are you going to come up with the funding for this project? Some of my money no doubt! Have you considered the financial ramifications of

If you are leaving, please take all your parts

I don't know if you've made out your will yet, but if you haven't here's a piece of advice you might want to consider: Make sure your undertaker gets all of you.

Many folks — some of them famous — neglected to write that proviso into their check-out contracts. They subsequently paid the price.

You could check it out with Galileo if he was still around. The celebrated astronomer shuffled off his mortal coil back in 1642, but his finger is still with us. If you visit the Florence Museum of History and Science in Italy you can view a special display that shows the poor man's blackened digit pointing eternally skyward.

It is Galileo's middle finger, significantly enough...

America's most famous president, George Washington, was buried with all pomp and ceremony back in 1799, but someone neglected to throw his teeth into the coffin. Actually, it was George's fault — he had mailed his extracted teeth to a dentist for use as a model for his dentures. The dentist hung on to the originals for souvenirs. He used to take them with him to parties as a conversation piece. They're still out there somewhere, so if you're at a soiree and somebody offers to show you George Washington's molars ... don't be afraid to bite.

Nothing as trivial as teeth or fingers for Jeremy Bentham. The English philosopher who died in 1832, left all his money to the London Hospital.

With one small catch.

Bentham insisted that his body be dissected and the remains "mummified." What's more, he directed that his preserved corpse was to be arranged sitting in an armchair at the Board of Directors table in the London Hospital in perpetuity.

To paraphrase Gertrude

by Arthur Black

Stein, a bequest is a bequest is a bequest. For the next 92 years, members of the London Hospital board got to share space at the table with the desiccated carcass of Jeremy Bentham smiling over them.

Mind you, to avoid any confusion, they placed a sign in front of Jeremy. The sign read NOT VOTING.

And then there's Speedy. Few deceased persons have spent as long between the mortician's slab and the grave as good old Speedy.

His real name was Henry Atkins. He was a black labourer in a tobacco factory in Paducah, Kentucky, back in the 1920's.

In 1928 while fishing on the Ohio River, Henry fell out of his boat and was drowned. He was poor, with no next of kin and no real friends.

Not yet anyway.

Speedy's corpse was about to meet A.Z. Hamock, a Paducah funeral director who happened to be fascinated by the Egyptian practice of mummification. Since nobody had claimed Speedy's remains, Hamock decided to try a little experimental embalming.

It worked. Although he turned the colour of a russet apple, Speedy did not undergo the usual process of decay.

Over the next 66 years, Speedy, an itinerant labourer, became probably the most famous citizen Paducah, Kentucky ever spawned. The Hamock family adopted him. Three times a year he was carefully washed and dressed in fresh clothes. Sightseers could come to the funeral home or see Speedy on national TV.

Museums and carnivals sent agents to try and buy Speedy. They offered lots of money, but the Hamocks turned them down.

Speedy was family.

Finally this summer, the descendants of A.Z. Hamock decided it was high time to treat Henry Atkins like a real member of the family. They laid him out in a black tuxedo and showered a blanket of red carnations on his coffin. The church choir sang a half dozen spirituals to Speedy and the minister at the local Baptist church gave him a rousing send-off sermon.

Sixty-six years after he tumbled out of a boat in the Ohio River, Henry Speedy Atkins finally went to his grave.

Rest in peace, Speedy.

Snowmobile shoppers could be helping out the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association (or the snowmobile club to which they belong) when they stop at the local Ski-Doo dealership. Everyone who visits the outlet before October 31 will be eligible for a draw for a Bombardier Trail Groomer. The only requirement for those wishing to participate, is that they be a current member of a snowmobile club. As dealers Paul Prentice and Steve Berry pointed out, the requirement will help boost the local club by encouraging people to join and participate in an organization which promotes well-planned trail maintenance. While the raffle includes a number of prizes for individuals, Bombardier is also giving away a BR-160 Trail Groomer, valued at $100,000. The groomer will be presented to the snowmobile club identified on the entry form when the special draw is held, to assist with winter trail grooming.

New gun law would cause culture shock banning firearms? Do you realize the loss that would occur with such a move? I'll venture to guess that millions of dollars are spent each year by sport shooters.

Your proposal would cause culture shock to the responsible Canadians who go sport hunting every year. Hunting and sport shooting are part of our heritage. You should respect our culture too. Truly Canadian, means to hold the cultural rights in high regard.

It has come to my attention that you assume there are very few hunters and gun owners in Etobicoke. Maybe you haven't heard from us because we really didn't think you would consider any further tightening of the gun laws. Rest assured you will be hearing plenty from us now.

You should put your ideas and effort towards solving the real problems of the criminal justice system. It would be a high point in my life to witness a justice minister take Canada back from the criminals. Enforce the existing laws!

Ministry presses for decision on acute care beds

After an hour and a half of closed session, the acting Health Services Board opened its meeting to the public last Wednesday evening at 9 p.m.

One of the first orders of business was to welcome Bev MacDuff of Gooderham to the board for her first meeting.

A motion by Ted Wilkes, and seconded by Rheta Jones, to make the decision that night on where the 19 acute care beds would be located was defeated after lengthy discussion.

Hugh Nichol and Paul Heffer both questioned whether the board had enough data or sufficient time to make an informed decision so soon.

Wilkes made the motion based on the Ministry of Health directive to make the decision as soon as possible.

"The ministry has asked us to make a quick decision," he explained, adding that if the decision isn't forthcoming soon, the county stands to lose the beds altogether.

"They really want us to make the decision," Jones said. "Whether its tonight or in two weeks it doesn't matter. But we need to make it very quickly."

There was some hope among board members that the ministry may be swayed to allow the 19 acute care beds to be split between the Haliburton and Minden hospitals. But the latest directive from the ministry is adamant that the board must choose one or the other. All 19 acute care beds must be in one location.

"Why are we voting at all?" Nichol questioned. "The Ministry of Health has already made the decision."

The question of whether or not the board should challenge the ministry's directive to have all of the acute care beds in one location was raised. But board chairman Stuart Baker said: "To force a confrontation with any of the ministries is not conducive to providing health care services for the county."

Baker cited the unpopular decision by the Ministry of Education to force junior kindergarten on the county against the wishes of almost everyone.

"We have to work within ministry guidelines," Baker said.

Board member Gord Monk took exception to the term confrontation.

"Confrontation doesn't solve anything," he said. "Negotiation is a better term."

With the defeat of Wilkes' motion, Barb Dawson gave notice that she intends to introduce a similar motion at the September 27 meeting. It is clear that the decision has to be made soon. If the motion is passed, that decision could be made as early as the next meeting.

A decision on who will be hired as an administrator is expected soon as well.

Dunsford anglers win "Stanley Cup" of Bass'n'Tario circuit

Armitage and James had a total weight for the two days of 10.33 pounds, moving them back to second place, which was worth $2,000 cash.

Ironically, if the Brooklin duo had not entered the illegal fish, they would still have had enough total weight (11.33 pounds) to win the event.

Armitage admitted that it was an oversight, stating that many of the tournaments he fishes have a 12-inch minimum size limit. He vowed to read the rules carefully from now on.

Along with the boat, the team of Hayford and Thompson took home a cash prize of $4,000.

Jim Estabrooks and Mike Jackson of Hamilton placed fourth with 8.88 pounds over the two-day event.

Fifth went to the husband and wife team of Rick and Debbie Verkrusen of Pontypool (8.77 pounds). The Verkrusens were declared the Central Division Team of the Year in the Bass 'n' Tario circuit.

Robert Bastone and Danny Bastone of North York were sixth with 8.37 pounds. Seventh place went to Dan Lethbridge and George Williams of London (8.00 pounds). Dave Ferguson and Biff Williston of Oakville were eighth (7.23), Don Campbell and David Shields of Strathroy were ninth (6.86) and Al Mason and Don Mason of London rounded out the top 10 with 6.32 pounds.

The weights recorded by the top teams are an indication of the tough fishing conditions. Tournaments earlier in the year were won with nearly three times the total weights of the Haliburton event.

"Poor weather conditions and drop-

Classic V champions: Bob Hayford and Don Thompson are joined on stage by their kids at the awards presentations of the 1994 Bass 'n' Tario championship bass fishing tournament in Haliburton. The two-day event was the season finale, with 52 teams qualifying for a shot at more than $30,000 in cash and prizes. The Dunsford duo's share is valued at more than $25,000.

ping water levels made this the toughest Classic in Bass 'n' Tario history," said Lynn Jennings of Bass 'n' Tario.

The biggest fish of the tournament was a 6.03 pounder which was caught by Fritz Beck of Belmont, Ontario. That was the only fish Beck caught over the weekend, placing him 11th overall.

Thompson said that the lures that were the best producers for him and Hayford were top water baits, and more specifically Zara Spooks. The winners caught their fish from Kashagawigamog Lake.

"We fished every point from this end to the other end," Thompson said.

The bigger fish of the event for the winners were smallmouth bass but the majority of the fish they caught were largemouth.

Those who missed the weigh-in ceremonies will have an opportunity to catch the action on television. Angelo Viola of the Fishin' Canada show was on hand throughout the weekend filming the events for an upcoming episode of the television show.

Tournament organizer Randy Jennings termed the Classic V the Stanley Cup of the Bass 'n' Tario circuit.

The North Stars are minus 4, followed by Haliburton with minus 6.

Orillia B is minus 8, Bracebridge is minus 10 and the Parry Sound Strikers are minus 47 (14 for and 61 against).

The Rockets are third in the for/against department with 30 for and 17 against for a difference of 13.

Smile for the camera: Don't despair if you missed the Bass 'n' Tario Classic V bass tournament on the September 10 and 11 weekend in Haliburton. Angelo Viola of the Fishin' Canada television show was on hand with his crew to film the event for an upcoming show. Tournament organizer Randy Jennings (left) is seen here talking with Viola in front of the TV camera after the final weigh-in.

A four-year-old son who has an interest in hockey has prompted Greg Carpenter to get back into coaching after a 12 year absence.

Carpenter's son Derek just turned four and he is enrolled in the Minden Minor Hockey junior tyke division, which Greg will coach.

Greg Carpenter is not new to the coaching scene. He helped guide the Minden juveniles to the Parry Sound-Muskoka championship when he was 20 years old. He had been the trainer of the juveniles for most of the season but when the coach left the team late in the season, Carpenter took over. The team won the Northern Division championship.

The year before that, Carpenter helped Dave Dollo with the Minden peewee team.

At about age four, Carpenter started playing hockey with the Minden Minor Hockey system and he played through to the junior C level in Haliburton.

"I've always had good coaches and I hope to be a good coach myself," he said, adding that he hopes all the coaches will stay with it in spite of the hard time that they will sometimes get from some of the players' parents.

"Patients will be the big thing with this age group," Carpenter says. "A lot of them won't even know how to skate."

Skating will be the first thing that Carpenter will work on with the youngsters. They will have to learn to skate both forward and backward, without leaning on a hockey stick.

Once the skating skills are honed the team will learn the basics of as games are concerned. There is no set schedule for the tyke division.

"Maybe we'll take the midgets on," he quipped.

Rick Lowes has volunteered to help, and Carpenter said he would be happy to have three or four helpers so the kids can get instruction on a ratio of four or five to one.

All coaches have to take a certification course and Carpenter says he is just waiting for the minor hockey executive to tell him where and when he's supposed to go.

He knows the coming season will offer some challenges, but, he says: "I'm looking forward to it."

Senior curlers take to the golf links for some pre-season competition

Just like a bunch of professional baseball players, the curlers of the Minden Seniors Curling Club took to the golf course on September 8. Beautiful white clouds roamed the blue sky and the sunshine made for excellent golfing weather.

Blairhampton was the scene of the competition and the teams on top were John Thomas, Jean Jackson, Ralph Newton and Dave McAdam, who came in first, Earl McDonald, Chris Dollo, Bill Trapp and Milt Endicott who came in second and Ted Wilkes, Dorothy Strype, Ruby Henerson and Russ Fair who came in third.

In the "Closest to the Hole" competition, winner of the ladies was Angela O'Neill and the winner of the men's was John Thomas.

In the "Longest Drive" competition there were some excellent drives and the winners were - Ladies - Merle Codlin, and Men - Stan Hill.

In the evening the golfers and non-golfing members all went to the Club where Convenor Hugh Hamilton and Kitchen Committee Chairman Morris Duff and their respective committees had prepared a wonderful evening for all. The food was very delicious with hot beef on a bun, fresh corn on the cob and salads, followed by lots of "no-no" munchies for dessert. We all did enjoy the fellowship of our curling friends and social members.

The golfing prizes were presented to the respective winners and the door prizes were drawn, resulting in a few smiling faces.

We are now coming down to the time when we should be thinking of some serious curling. The members may wish to mark their calendars for the following dates:

September 26 - 7:30 p.m. at M.C.C. - Seniors Wine and Cheese party. Prospective curlers welcome.

Week of September 26 - Date, time and place is to be announced - meeting of skips and conveners outlining new rules for rating, skip duties, etc.

October 13 - in the morning there will be a mini curling clinic for new curlers and in the afternoon a mini curling clinic for older curlers who wish to brush up their skills.

October 17 - Senior Men's League - Start up

October 19 - Senior Ladies' League - Start up

October 21 - Senior Mixed League - Start up

We do sincerely look forward to an excellent year of curling, as in the past May you all enjoy the fellowship and competition in the club and as we say as we step onto the ice, "Good Curling."

Going back to school on the tube

by Susan Wilson

Distance learning sounds like a concept developed with Haliburton County in mind. You don't have to move away from home, or travel once a week to another centre, or give up your day job. In the comfort of your own home, at the convenience of your own schedule (if you have a VCR), you can improve your level of education, training, and general knowledge — no matter where you live.

TVOntario offers every level of distance learning. You can complete high school, earn university credits, get professional training and accreditation, upgrade your work skills, take up a new hobby, or round out your general knowledge of a wide range of issues.

Through seven universities and two community colleges, TVOntario is offering 15 credit courses in 10 fields this fall and winter, from English to Business to Sociology. The teacher comes to you via the television set. The textbooks, videotapes, audio tapes, assignments and exams come to you by mail. The interaction comes to you through teleconferencing, computer conferences and an assigned tutor. You can get a free copy of the Post-Secondary Education Calendar by calling 1-800-INFO TVO (1-800-463-6886) and asking for Customer Service.

There's also a free Smart Shop Catalogue available from the same telephone number. The Smart Shop Catalogue has 55 pages of videos on every topic under the sun — from arts and crafts to raising a family to teacher education to high school on air. Again, call 1-800-INFO TVO and ask for Customer Service.

Distance education provides half-a-dozen more reasons why TVO is television that matters — and why we must have clear off-air access to the signal in our community.

Program Highlights:

On Monday, September 26th, TVOntario launches its new fall season. At 8:00 p.m. that evening, it also launches its new daily current affairs program. Studio 2 will give Ontario viewers a one-hour, in-depth look at local and world events, economic issues, social and cultural trends, entertainment, and the arts. "We intend to create a unique blend of analysis, talk, commentary, and phone-ins," says Doug Grant, TVO's Head of Current Affairs Programming. "The aim is to provide viewers with a clear alternative by taking the time to examine the issues of the day as they affect the people of Ontario."

The show will have two hosts. Steve Paikin hosted TVO's Between the Lines from 1992 to 1994 and is still part of the TVO's Fourth Reading. Mary Hynes was host, writer, and producer of CBC Radio's innovative, award-winning sports show, The Inside Track, for five years.

Allan Gregg, founder and chief guru of the polling company Decima Research and now head of Viacom Canada, will be a contributing editor on the show with a regular segment called "Gregg and Company."

(For a fast-paced, 35-minute preview of the new fall season, tune in between Elwy's two movies at 10:45 p.m. next Saturday, September 24th.)

Susan Wilson represents Haliburton County on TVOntario's Southcentral Regional Council. If you would like to help get access to the TVO signal or have any other comments, call her at 286-6009. This column appears every four weeks. It reports on the progress of the TVO Action Team and highlights upcoming TVO programs.

Land owners say it's the county's fault. The MNR says otherwise.

Salt blamed for Ingoldsby tree deaths

Andrew Milne

Rows of dead and dying trees along the south shore of Lake Kashagawigamog have residents and cottagers in the Ingoldsby area pointing fingers at Haliburton County's roads department.

But a Ministry of Natural Resources technician who inspected the site, says the department's salt use — which the residents had suspected as a cause — isn't the problem.

Mary Hincks is president of the Lake Kashagawigamog Cottage Organization, and lives adjacent to a site near Ingoldsby where the trees are dying. One tall white pine, maybe a hundred meters from Hincks' land, stands totally denuded — not a needle visible on its bare branches.

Hincks describes a row of "sixty to eighty dead pine trees in a one kilometer stretch — trees that were not dead and dying a year and a half ago."

"These trees vary from being saplings, to one tree they estimate to be 275 years old," she continued. "As of this spring all these trees were showing signs of dying. All you have to do is stand out in front of our property and look down the road and you see these huge, beautiful trees that have died."

Hincks says for a number of reasons residents suspect the cause is heavy use of salt on the roads (the trees line a thin strip of land between the road and the lake).

First of all, road salt applied in heavy doses has been shown to injure roadside trees.

Second, "We're on a milk run," she says. "We're near the county yard. And every time they go out, they're dumping."

James Munn, an area technician with the Minden MNR, did an inspection of the site, at the residents' request.

He did not, however, come up with salt as the cause for the damage. Munn says the problem is primarily root restriction and crowding, which has made the trees susceptible to disease.

"The main problem that I found with those trees," he says, "is that they're growing on a very narrow strip of land between the county road and the lake. This would restrict their effective rooting zone severely, and trees in that type of location do not generally have the longevity of trees with an adequate rooting zone."

This was primarily a problem with the larger trees he inspected, he says and twenty or so of the white pine also showed symptoms of a disease called white pine blister rust — a fungal infection characterized by "a bark-free top and a lot of sap running down the stem of the tree." The rust is a parasitic fungus which cycles between two hosts — gooseberry bushes and white pine, and is most typical in lakeshore areas of high humidity.

A number of the white spruce showed symptoms of another disease, called Cytospora canker, which is, he says, "fairly common in mature spruce, especially where rooting zone is limited and when they've been under a period of drought stress, and I've looked at a number of spruce trees in the area that have this disease."

Another problem, says Munn, is that, in flattening out one grassy area, layers of soil were added in places over the feeder roots of certain of the white pines.

This cuts off soil aeration, eventually killing the roots and thus the tree — this was the case with the bare white pines closest to Hincks' property, says Munn.

The red pines closest to the store, he says, were infected by Armillaria root rot, a disease that primarily affects trees of this species in a particularly dense planting.

He can't identify salt damage as a cause, he says, because this usually shows up as extreme discoloration of the foliage in the young sapling stage of white pine and red cedar, in the spring, and the people he talked to did not recall seeing this.

Hincks and the other residents, however, aren't convinced.

"It just doesn't satisfy us," says Hincks. The roads have always been here. The roots have always been restricted."

"And if it's root restriction," she says, "why would sixty to eighty trees in a period of a year and a half all decide 'We're going to die now?'"

Hincks planned to make a presentation to the roads committee September 17.

Mary Hincks stands in front of a dead white pine adjacent to her property, near Ingoldsby on South Kashagawigamog Lake Road.

Here is what you can put where when you recycle

You do recycle....don't you?

Anson, Hindon and Minden township has announced that the municipality is now able to accept additional materials for recycling. New techniques allow mixing materials into two coloured boxes, blue and green, that will eventually be sorted mechanically at the recycling depot.

Paper and paper products should be placed in the blue box. These items are: newspaper, "junk mail", cash register receipts, writing paper, envelopes, computer paper, paper packaging, brown paper bags, brown packaging paper, magazines, catalogues, telephone books, paper egg cartons, cereal boxes, shoe boxes, tissue boxes and milk and juices cartons. The recycling depot asks that you do not put cardboard into the blue box.

In the green box you can put these items; cans including pop, soup, vegetable, etc., but no aerosol or paint cans; clear and coloured glass, but no window glass; plastics; hard and soft containers, pop bottles, grocery bags, yogurt, margarine, ice cream containers; aluminium; including pie plates, TV dinner trays, tin foil, oven roasters; and styrofoam; meat and bakery trays, egg cartons, as well as plastic and foam cups. The depot asks that all containers be cleaned before placing in the bin.

Composters may be purchased at the Municipal Office during regular office hours at a cost of $16.00 each. This includes a "How-To" video. Remember, one-third of household waste can be composted and used as a natural fertilizer.

Man dies in boating accident on Maple Lake

A boating mishap on Maple lake in Stanhope Township has claimed the life of a 60 year old man. According to the Minden detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, the accident occurred Monday September 12.

Police say the man was in a canoe as he attempted to free a floating dock used as a swimming platform when the boat overturned and the man was thrown into the water.

The victim was wearing boots and work clothes. The police say there was no evidence of a lifejacket in the canoe.

Divers and boaters searched the area for a number of hours before the man's body was recovered about 15 metres from shore in six metres of water.

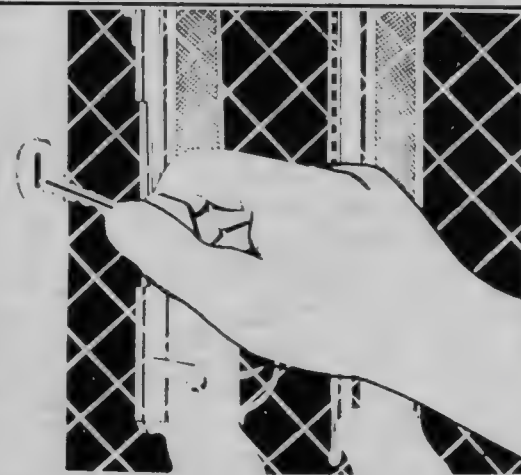

The victim has been identified as Garry Berenard Young of Oshawa.

Forest region declared 'ANSI'

Andrew Milne

The Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources (MNR) has declared an area around Clear Lake (on the borders of Stanhope and Sherborne townships) an Area of Natural and Scientific Interest (ANSI).

ANSIs are established, for different reasons, to protect regions from the effects of human activity. Various levels of protection are available under different programs, depending on the site. Since some sites are protected from hunting and fishing, anglers and hunters often have concerns related to their establishment.

The Clear Lake site is designated a conservation reserve, which means it is protected from logging, mining, and hydroelectric power developments. Activities such as hunting, fishing, and camping — controlled on sites containing endangered species — will not be affected.

Clear Lake is North of Big Hawk Lake, West of Kennis Lake, and east of Sherborne Lake. The area is mostly crown land, and the ANSI is being mapped to go around private holdings.

The MNR regional ecologist was to formally define the boundaries at a meeting in Huntsville September 15.

ANSIs, says Barb Boland of the Minden MNR, are declared primarily to protect ecosystems that are either unique or representative of ecosystems found throughout the province, or to protect endangered species.

"They're looking for representation of natural landscapes and features," says Boland. "They look at the diversity within these sites — of the flora and fauna on them. They look at the ecological function of the site. They look at some of the conditions that the site is in, like the impact of past man-made disturbances, or perhaps natural disturbances.

Deadfall in a hemlock stand near Black Cat Lake in Sherborne Township, near the region being considered for the ANSI. Note the quantity of debris on the forest floor. There are hemlocks in this stand over 200 years old.

"With the Clear Lake site specifically," she added, "it probably is a better representation of old growth hemlock than some of the sites in Algonquin Park because it's isolated, and it hasn't been disturbed for a long time. That's where the representation part of it comes into play."

Some of the hemlocks in the region are over 200 years old, but this isn't the only thing about the area that makes it attractive as an ANSI.

"It's a mix of many different forest types," says Boland. "There are some stands of hemlock. There are a number of stands of white pine. There's beech and some mixed forest. There's some young hemlock. It's a very diverse area."

Scientists also find the area interesting because the pattern of succession — the pattern of species supplanting species after a disturbance — has left a very clear record for them to follow.

Outdoors association concerned over Clear Lake ANSI

"According to some of the professionals in that field," says Boland, "they can trace the fire history in areas like Clear Lake fairly well, to kind of map the disturbances and how they're affected the landscape as it appears today."

The idea of protecting representative regions like Clear Lake has been around for a while, and is hardly unique to Ontario. A world commission on the environment and development recently put forth a recommendation to the effect that such representative landscapes should be preserved, and the World Wildlife Federation actually issues a scorecard to governments around the world on how well they are doing in this respect.

Such initiatives naturally tend to interfere with development and to conflict with recreational uses such as hunting and fishing. Critics concerned with these, and other, issues have called the criteria used to establish ANSIs arbitrary.

In the case of the Clear Lake reserve, there was some concern among local hunters and anglers.

Ted Vasey is president of the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association. Members of his association have been following the issue for some time now. "We've been concerned all through it," says Vasey, "but it doesn't seem like we could change anything... our say didn't seem to matter."

"At the present time they're saying hunting isn't stopped," he says. "But we know they can change their minds on that at any time."

As anyone who's been there can tell you, it's a beautiful area, if a little hard to navigate. The terrain is fairly rugged. Canoes are still probably the most practical form of transportation here — preferably light ones that are easily portaged.

Under the canopy of a hemlock stand that's been there for two centuries, the sunlight is diffused, filtered through millions of stubby, green needles. Many of the trees are leaning, and there's a lot of dead wood on the forest floor. Two hundred years is a long time for an individual hemlock to live. But the stands may well live longer.

"It's interesting because there are some areas with really young hemlock coming in," says Boland. "I don't know if that's terribly unusual, but it means that the composition on the site — the hemlock — will remain. In some areas of hemlock it doesn't regenerate as well. It's quite an interesting landscape."

Consultations process slows Trails and Tours Network Strategy

Phase one of the Trails and Tours Network Strategy for Haliburton County has been delayed by about two weeks.

Brian Dean, President of the Haliburton County Chamber of Commerce said that the data has all been collected but consultations with businesses such as lodges and resorts were delayed until after the Labour Day weekend.

Dean said that some townships have offered financial support but others were unable to because of budget constraints. To help offset the shortfall, local businesses came up with some extra funds and the Chamber of Commerce contributed more than it had planned.

In addition to the local funding, the network will be seeking money from the federal and provincial government coffers.

Aside from the interviews with businesses, everything is on schedule, according to Dean. The report on Phase One of the project is expected in mid-October. A tentative date of October 17 has been set.

Dean said that the threat by forest owners, to close snowmobile trails if the Forest Management Tax Rebate Program isn't reinstated, hasn't been extended to the trails network group.

"The forest owners have been very co-operative," Dean said. "We've never had any problems with them."

Completion of the project is expected within three to five years, but Dean said that the Chamber plans to start marketing what is available now, in 1995.

"The study is right on track," Dean said.

He added that there are some trails that can be established right now with very little cost.

WATERFRONT ACREAGES

Probably the last really private lakefront acreage in the Minden area. Heavily wooded with old growth trees, overlooking two lakes with about 700 feet lakefront. About 25 acres with a high promontory having a breathtaking view. Build your dream chalet above and a beach house below, enjoy the best of both worlds. Better still, included in the acreage is a separate lakefront lot, if desire, 2 family members could participate.

ALSO

An old Pioneer Farm holding from long ago. You can still find vestiges of old stone and rail fences and parts of fields still clear. Mostly bush, with streams and ponds. Around 1000 feet of lakefront, very private, as the lake is Crown land on both sides. Property fronts on a township road, and like the acreage above, also contains a separate lakefront lot, in case more than one in the family wishes to participate. Located south and east of town, very handy for Peterborough residents.

The recent visitors from Minden Germany were given a warm welcome when they arrived in the community on Monday. The pastry chef at Pinestone Resort, where the visitors stayed, created this special cake featuring the flags of the two nations. Admiring the handiwork prior to slicing into it are, from the left, Tracy Evans from Pinestone, Hans Lutterman, Reeve Bern Berry, Hans Laus and Pinestone representative Kim Elias.

Some of the Minden Germany visitors enjoyed a tour of the Archie Stouffer Elementary School. Principal Peter Forgrave, right, answered their questions as he guided them through the main features of the new building. The visitors were particularly interested to learn that most of the 700 students arrived by bus. They were delighted to find them-selves in a Kindergarten, a German word which translates literally to 'children's garden'.

Meeting fails to resolve fisheries concernsBerry disappointed with MNR intransigence

by Jerry Grozelle

The Ministry of Natural Resources strategy for the management of natural reproducing trout lakes was discussed again at the September 8 meeting of Anson, Hindon and Minden council.

County Warden Jim McMahon arranged a meeting with ministry officials earlier this month. Along with McMahon, AHM Reeve Bern Berry, Dysart et al Councillor Murray Fearrey, Bryan Brown of Haliburton Community Futures and Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association President Ted Vasey were among the people who attended the meeting.

"We tried to persuade them (ministry officials) to have another public meeting but, Stan Flemming said he thought it would just turn into a complaint session with ministry personnel being badgered," Berry said. "I couldn't help but think they had their minds made up and they won't be giving any consideration to the economics."

Berry said that he left the meeting disappointed.

"The bottom line is that they would rather meet with 500 people (individually) than have one meeting," he said.

It was pointed out that the ministry has been stocking lake trout for 40 years or more and ministry personnel were asked if that hasn't already had an effect on the genetics of the natural trout populations.

Berry quoted ministry District Manager Stan Flemming as saying that there hadn't been too much interbreeding yet and that the natural trout populations could still be saved.

Berry wondered aloud if the people who drafted the new management strategy options were "born-again biologists" because for 40 years they have been advocating stocking of lake trout and now they have reversed their thinking.

Councillor Jeanne Anthon defended the ministry, saying: "It takes a very long time to determine genetic changes."

According to Berry, one person asked if the ministry had made a mistake by stocking trout into naturally producing lake trout lakes and that reply was in the affirmative.

Another person questioned whether or not anglers really cared if the fish they caught were natural fish or stocked fish and ministry officials admitted that it really didn't matter to the anglers as long as they were able to catch fish.

Berry quoted a Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association suggestion that the ice fishing season be delayed by two weeks to cut down on the harvest.

"They threw that suggestion out, saying that people would only fish that much harder when the season opened," Berry said. "I don't know about them, but my day just has 24 hours."

Berry said that it comes down to money, or lack of it.

"The question is whether it is expensive to the municipality or expensive to the MNR," he said, implying that the ministry is willing to cut its costs at the expense of the municipality.

Councillors Grant Plooard and Jeanne Anthon also met with ministry officials to discuss the issue. They both seemed to come away with a more positive feeling.

Plooard said that the slot limit isn't a bad alternative as long as they don't ban the use of live bait.

"I think if it was made very emphatically clear that the banning of live bait is unacceptable, they could be persuaded to change their minds on that issue," he said.

He admitted that the wording of the options in the questionnaire doesn't allow the use of live bait with the slot limit choice.

Anthon said that the ministry biologists were instructed to come up with the options that would do the most good for the fishery and that other suggestions would likely be rejected because the options presented were the best solutions under the circumstances.

People who are concerned about the proposals have until September 23 to fill out the questionnaire and make their views known. Questionnaires are available at the Minden Ministry of Natural Resources office.

SLACAR wraps up another season in the Highlands

Submitted by Ken Brown

Hats off to the South Lake Association of Cottagers and Residents (SLACAR) and their president Gerry Roy as they mark completion of another summer and a decade of service to their membership.

SLACAR continued this year to test water quality in the lake in conjunction with the Ministry of Environment, engaged in education work to preserve our lake environment, advanced the preparation of a 'Lake Study', monitored Snowdon Township municipal meetings, and communicated all of this information to its members.

SLACAR was successful in persuading the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources (MNR) to conduct a septic system survey on all of the properties at South Lake. Individual owners have received written notification regarding their respective property. A summary of that survey will be available as soon as the ministry does a total analysis.

The association continues to participate in the Federation of Ontario Cottagers and has an activist role in the Lake Stewards program.

This summer another survey was distributed to the membership in response to questions raised at the annual meeting regarding wildlife preservation on the lake, regarding boating activity, and regarding watercraft safety and pollution. At this early date 50 percent of the membership have sent in completed survey forms. The results will be analyzed over the winter months and made available next season.

The volunteer work of the officers and directors of SLACAR is understood and appreciated. Membership in the association this year remains at the satisfactory level of 85% of eligible property owners. SLACAR urges 100 percent participation.

A summer would not be complete without the PIGs program and a gala picnic on South Lake. Snowdon Township Councillor Ray Lymer and his wife Eleanor organized the Pitch In Gang and patrolled the roadsides around the lake with 25 volunteers, picking up and bagging cans, bottles and debris. The Gang loaded 15 bags of litter and took it to the dump.

Later that same day the PIGs received a free hot dog on the attractive lakeside property of Phyllis and Kevin DeGrace, to open the annual picnic. The theme of the day was 'the fifties' — wide flowing skirts, bobbie sox and saddle shoes were the order of the day for ladies of every age, and men and boys with slicked down hair wore white sox, wide belts and tight tee shirts. Sixty five members and families tossed eggs, played horseshoes and ate corn and hot dogs. Bill Kelly and Gerry Roy tended the hot dog stand. Lance Taylor ran the horseshoe tournament and Dave Donaldson produced the corn with Mike Solnik and helpers. Ray Lymer did the preparation and cleanup.

Gail Rowett led the games, assisted at the microphone by Doug Moore. Peggy Kielly and Phyllis Brown greeted all at the reception desk. The weather was fine and socializing with neighbours made for a lovely day. Our thanks to hosts Phyllis and Kevin.

A number of SLACAR members are year-round residents on the lake and are enjoying lovely fall colours and weather. But many cottagers have locked up their places and headed for the city to deal with work, school and the winter. All of us enjoyed another wonderful summer season and wish our many friends in Haliburton County a warm and healthy winter.

Winter is Coming!

They have found a community need and responded

Judith Merrit and Sandra Patenaude, founders of the Christian mission "Put the Word into Action", are still offering free clothing to people in need, but are having difficulty finding certain types of clothes for children and men.

In February, Merrit and Patenaude decided it was their duty to help the needy by providing free clothing. Since then they have collected clothes, furniture, bedding and some money from people all over the county, churches, missions and realtors. They have their own van, and will bring clothes to those who need them, if they don't have a vehicle. They have been extremely grateful for the help from the community.

"I simply can't believe how much the community has been involved with helping. We really feel as though we have been blessed," said Merrit.

Although they have received a lot, and have helped many families, Merrit and Patenaude are in need of more. "We are almost out of men's clothing and we are totally out of bedding. We went through so many sleeping bags, it was incredible. But what we really need is undergarments for children," said Patenaude.

"We don't take them unless they are brand new, and not too many people have sent new underwear. We have to buy them ourselves, and we need money for that. We want to tell people that we do accept cash donations as well as clothing. And for those who want it, we will give a receipt because we are a registered charity," said Merrit.

In the past 10 days the women have given away 1,500 units of clothes. "One family had eight children, and they left with seven garbage bags full of clothes," said Merrit.

"We hope to be reaching out in other areas and get more people involved. It is amazing the amount of people who want to help, and all of the love that flowed back is wonderful. It feels good," said Patenaude.

Judith Merrit and Sandra Patenaude are surrounded by a sea of clothing, all donated. They are still in need of children's under garments, men's clothes and bedding. The pair collect clothing and distribute it free of charge to those in need. Contributions can be made by contacting the two at 286-6788.

Victoria-Haliburton MP John O'Reilly brought greetings from the federal government to Snowdon residents Bob and Audrey Vick when they celebrated their fiftieth anniversary. The couple were the guests of honour at an open house held at the Gelert Community Centre.

Local Witnesses attend assembly

The first of two conventions for local Witnesses of this area was held at the Norval Assembly Hall of Jehovah Witnesses this past weekend. The convention had an attendance of over 900 each day.

The theme of the gathering was "Stay Awake, Stand Firm, Grow Mighty." This theme was highlighted throughout the program, helping those in attendance to focus on the need for a spiritual examination in order to maintain standing with God. It was pointed out repeatedly in talks and demonstrations, that Christians must stay awake and avoid distractions in order to advance spiritually.

On Saturday, new witnesses were publicly baptized, thus demonstrating that they have made a commitment to serve God and zealously bear witness about Him.

Sunday afternoon Mr. Wayne Johnson, a representative of the Watchtower Society developed the theme, "What is your standing with God?" which encouraged the audience to be determined to stand firm for scriptural values and thus gain God's blessings now and in the future.

TSW report

The Haliburton area Lakes dropped about five per cent to reach 61.6 per cent on Tuesday, September 6. This is now a bit lower than the same date in 1993, but still above the 19-year average.

Rainfall has been light in the Kawarthas during August and generally just sufficient to run a flow close to the average for the month. September Otonabee average flow is only a little more than August at 40.4 cubic metres per second. The present flow is about 30 metres per second.

This week should see a continuing decline of lake levels near the seasonal norm.

The real bottom line

Reflections

by David Suzuki

"Look at that insect," the grandmother said, pointing at the beetle lying motionless on the side-walk.

"Oh, its battery must be dead!" responded the boy.

This story was related to me in Japan last spring. Apocryphal or not, it was meant to illustrate how disconnected from nature modern people have become. To the boy, even an insect is merely an object manufactured by humans.

I thought of that anecdote while lying on a dock on the shores of Smoke Lake in Algonquin Park. The reason we have become so reckless with the ecological birthright of our children must be the illusion that we are in total command of our surroundings, even to the extent of being able to "manage natural resources."

Herein Algonquin, we have an opportunity to see that nature is complex beyond our understanding.

The brilliant panoply of stars overhead at night is a startling contrast to the limited display visible in any large city on a "clear" night. Gazing at the spectacular starscape above me, I wonder whether urban children respond to their first sight of an Algonquin night sky with awe or fear.

I suspect a bit of both.

Our perceptions and values are formed by our experiences and surroundings. For example, prairie people have told me of their great love of the big sky and the distant horizon that makes them feel claustrophobic in Vancouver, hemmed in by mountains that seem to push them into the ocean.

For most people today, the human-created environment of cities shapes priorities and the way we see the world. Here in Algonquin, we have to recognize that there is a different rhythm driven by the seasons, climate, the forest and animals, over which humans have no control.

"Tonight is 'wolf night' in Algonquin," someone said to explain the people who had gathered to howl into the forest. The haunting reply of a wolf confirmed an inter-species communication and sent squeals of delight through the crowd.

This is quite a change in attitude from that reflected in fairy tales of vicious wolves trying to make a meal of Little Red Riding Hood or the three little pigs.

This summer, I have been able to spend time on Quadra Island and the Babine River in British Columbia, in the Arctic around Baffin Island and Greenland and now in Algonquin, the jewel of Ontario's park system. Taken together, they give an overwhelming sense of the awesome beauty of this part of the planet. But these islands of wilderness are decreasing in number and size as the relentless pressure of human beings continues. Too many of us want too much to be sustained indefinitely by the productive capacity of even the most distant ecosystems.

Communities of organisms with whom we are discovering a spiritual kinship, while grizzlies, walrus, wolves are threatened by our need for 'development.' Degradation of natural systems has become inevitable because of an economic system that is fatally flawed by its "species chauvinism". Economists appraise everything in the world on the basis of perceived utility for human beings alone. If we can use it, it has value, if not, it's worthless.

That might work if implicit in such a system was an understanding that survival and quality of life depend on what we extract from the Earth, air, water, soil, biodiversity. Unfortunately, that isn't how it works.

Economists define those things as the very things that keep us alive, as externalities to the system they've invented! And therein is the basis of our destructiveness. When ecosystems and species are considered so vast and endlessly self-renewing that their finite limits are not an integral part of economics, the demands for steady growth cannot be sustainable and becomes suicidal. And nowhere in such a system, is there any acknowledgement of the importance and reality of spiritual values.

The immense expanse we call Canada includes some of the unique and special places on this planet. We are the envy of most people in the world. We have vast natural resources, a population of well-educated people capable of creating everything a modern society needs.

Yet, global economics reduces Canada to the edge of poverty, with political leaders pleading like beggars for foreign investment. That same system defines Japan as wealthy, despite having few natural resources and being burdened with massive pollution.

Global economics esteems human activity and creativity above all else, so Japan becomes an economic powerhouse and Canada a near basketcase. The chortle of a loon which had inspired generations of Canadian artists and writers brings me back to a reality too easily forgotten in cities. Loons and moose remind me how important it is to share this Earth with other species. They inform us that we must temper out impulse to exploit and profit because there are forces and phenomena that lie beyond our scientific understanding.

IN MEMORIAM

KIMBLE, Perry Allan - In loving memory of our son, brother, Dad and Uncle who left us September 20, 1992.

God looked around His garden
 And found an empty space,
 Then He looked down upon the earth
 And saw Perry's tired face.
 He put His arms around him
 And lifted him to rest
 God's garden must be beautiful,
 For He only takes the best.
 He saw the roads were getting rough

And the hills were hard to climb
 So He closed his weary eyes
 And whispered "Peace be thine".
 It broke our hearts to lose him
 But he didn't go alone
 For part of us went with him
 The day God called him home.
 "All the days ordained for me were written in your Book before one of them came to be."
 Psalm 139, Verse 16, N.I.V.
 Sorrow is not forever, LOVE IS.
 Lovingly cherished in our hearts forever, Mother and Dad, Joshua, Beverly, Timothy, Amanda, Harold, Shannon & Emily.

BULL: In loving memory of a dear husband, Stuart who passed away September 18, 1980 and son Lorne who passed away December 31, 1992.

What we would give to clasp their hands,
 Their happy faces to see,
 To hear their voices, see their smiles

That meant so much to me
 We dream of you dear loved ones

And see your smiling faces
 And know that you are happy
 In our Father's chosen place.
 Fondly loved and deeply mourned

Heart of my heart we miss you so;

Often my darlings, tears will flow;
 Dimming your pictures where'er we go;

'Tis sad but true, we will abide,
 Until some day we'll be side by side.

Sadly missed by Hazel, Lorraine and Lorna, families and friends.

It's always tempting...but It's always tempting to simply jump in the boat and go, but take a moment to ensure your safety. Take along all the safety equipment the law requires. Check the weather forecast before you leave the dock. Tell someone where you are going and when you expect to return. Leave the alcohol on shore.
